Contributors

Andrew Wilkins is Reader in Education Policy and Director of Research (Education) at Goldsmiths, University of London. His books include Policy Foundations of Education (Bloomsbury 2022), Education Governance and Social Theory: Interdisciplinary Approaches to Research (with Antonio Olmedo, Bloomsbury 2018), and Modernising School Governance: Corporate Planning and Expert Handling in State Education (Routledge 2016).

Steven J. Courtney is Professor of Sociology of Education Leadership at the Manchester Institute of Education, University of Manchester. His research uses critical approaches which seek to explain and theorise education policy and educational leaders' identity and practice, as well as the relationship between these. He is currently Co-Editor-in-Chief of the journal Critical Studies in Education and co-convenor of the MIE research group, Critical Education Leadership and Policy (CELP).

Nelli Piattoeva is Associate Professor of Education at Tampere University, Finland. Her research focuses on the changing means of the governance of schooling (e.g., datafication) and on the role of formal education in societal governance (e.g., schools as sites of nation-building). She is Co-Director of the Laboratory of International Assessment Studies. At Tampere University, she leads an interdisciplinary Research Centre on Transnationalism and Transformation (TRANSIT).
