Biography

Elena Artamonova was born in Moscow and studied at the Gnesin Music College with Ludmila Vernigora and at the Tchaikovsky Conservatoire with Yuri Bashmet. After gaining her diplomas with honours in 1993 and 1998, she continued her studies in London with Martin Outram, violist of the Maggini Quartet, and attended the master classes of Tabea Zimmermann, Nobuko Imai, Simon Rowland-Jones and Levon Chilingirian. During her postgraduate course, she won several prizes, including the British Reserve string prize and Michael Stucky Trust award. In April 2000 she was awarded the Associateship of the Royal College of Music with Honours and Fellowship of the London College of Music, subsequently becoming Musician in Residence and Head of Strings at Rannoch School, Scotland. She is currently Musician in Residence at New Hall School, Essex. Elena has performed as a soloist, chamber-musician and as a viola leader in Europe, the USA, and the Far East. Her recent engagements have included a series of research presentations in the UK, collaborations with the American Viola Society and Henle Verlag in Germany and recitals with Nicholas Walker (piano/harpsichord) exploring often undiscovered and diverse repertoire from Marais to Schnittke with special emphasis on Russian heritage. Their recording of compete music for viola and piano by Sergel Vasilenko, the fruit of Elena's archival investigations, has been recently released by the London label 'Toccata Classics'.

Robin Bigwood grew up near Bristol and studied harpsichord and piano at the Royal College of Music in London. He won the Broadwood Harpsichord Competition in 1995. Nowadays he performs regularly as a soloist and continuo player with Feinstein Ensemble and Passacaglia, and has also appeared with The King's Consort, London Baroque, Florilegium, Britten Sinfonia, and The Sixteen. Outside of performing, Robin has taught harpsichord at Centre for Young Musicians in London, Trinity College of Music and The Yehudi Menuhin School. With the flautist and recorder player Annabel Knight he runs The Workshop Series, an acclaimed series of concerts in Lewes, East Sussex, held at the workshop of harpsichord maker and restorer Malcolm Rose. He is passionate about recording technology, established the label Barn Cottage Records, and is a regular author for the recording magazine Sound on Sound.

Artists & Future Concerts

The Artamonova-Walker duo gave its first performance in April 2005 and since then has explored a fascinating, often undiscovered and diverse repertoire for viola and piano or harpsichord from Marais and Handel to Alexander Grechaninov and Alfred Schnittke. Their concert programmes, with special emphasis on the Russian heritage, has brought to light some remarkable arrangements by Vadim Borisovsky of works by Vivaldi-Bach, Schumann and Dmitry Borovnyansky as well as little-known viola music by Anton Rubinstein, Sergei Vasilenko, Vladimir Kovalev, Sulikhan Tsintsadze, Georg Kirkor and Sergei Slonimsky. Their CD with the first recording of complete viola works by Sergei Vasilenko, the fruit of Elena's archival investigations, is available now on Toccata Classics label.

Composers

Alexander Gretchaninov was a near contemporary of Rachmaninov, when a student at the Moscow Conservatory and similarly left Russia, living first in Paris and then in the United States of America. He continued in his compositions the traditions of an earlier generation. The first two of his four symphonies were written before the Russian Revolution. He died in New York.

Nicholai Roslavets finished his studies of music composition under Sergei Vasilenko. He was also inspired by Scriabin amongst others but developed his own style. In 1933 Roslavets returned to Moscow where he kept his head above water as a day labourer. As 'public enemy', he was one of the condemned composers of Russia for several decades until the last years of his life. He died in Moscow on 23 August 1944.

Sergei Vasilenko was influenced by the nineteenth-century nationalist school, by his teacher Taneyev and by Scriabin, adding an interest in symbolism and hints of early modernism. These viola compositions not only expand the repertoire of the instrument but also point to the courage of a composer who spent his life treading the tight-rope between his own musical interests and the demands of Soviet 'socialist realism'.

In 2003-4, commissioned by Comus Edition, Elena translated a book on the history of the viola written by a Russian author, Stanislaw Poniatowski. This historical area has been a central interest for her for some years. Since autumn 2008, she has been working on her research for 'The Unknown Viola Music of the Russian Avant-garde Movement' at Goldsmith College, Centre for Russian Music, University of London, under the guidance of Professor Alexander Ivashkin, studying at the central libraries and archives in Moscow, London and New York. Her recent engagements have included a series of research presentations in the UK and collaborations with the American Viola Society and Henle Verlag. Elena has performed as a soloist, chamber-musician and as a viola leader in Europe, the USA, and the Far East.

Nicholas Walker, acclaimed by The Evening Standard London as 'a prodigy, of awesome technical fluency backed by exceptional artistry', studied at the Royal Academy of Music and at the Moscow Conservatoire. Winner of the first Newport International Piano Competition, he has performed with major British Orchestras, recorded for BBC Radio 3, Cirrus, ASV, BMG Arte Nova and Chandos, and given recitals worldwide. The first two discs of his recording of the complete Balakirev piano music for ASV received considerable critical acclaim, as has his live recording of the Lipunov Sonata on Danacord. He is also preparing an edition of all Johann Baptist Cramer's piano concertos, the first of which he played in the London Festival Orchestra's 'Virtuoso Pianists' series. In St Petersburg recently he gave the first public performance of Balakirev's Grande Fantaisie on Russian Folksongs, and a Balakirev Festival commemorating the centenary of the composer's death was held at St John's Smith Square at the end of 2010. He is currently recording the complete piano music of Balakirev for Naxos.

Sergey Vasilenko (1872-1956), Sonata for viola and piano Op.46, 1923

Allegro moderato-Andante amorevole-Fughetta-Tempo del commincio (Allegro moderato)

This single-movement sonata was dedicated to Vadim Borisovsky (1900-72), who gave the premiere in the Small Hall of the Moscow Conservatoire with the composer at the piano on 8 January 1924. The style of the sonata blends reminiscences of Oriental and Romantic music with unrestrained emotional expression. Structurally, it combines elements of sonata form with concertante features, as the soloist is allotted a lengthy cadenza at one point as well as three shorter solo episodes. The opening sonata allegro (Allegro moderato) condenses exposition and development, concluding with a dramatic cadenza. Instead of an immediate recapitulation, a second section, Andante amorevole, presents two themes of an intimate and lyrical character. A short vigorous episode, marked Molto agitato, introduces the next section, Fughetta, which comprises an exposition and counter-exposition but no development. A contrasting contemplative passage marked Sostenuto leads to a fourth section, Tempo del commincio, which acts as the recapitulation of the first movement. A modified reprise of the third-movement fughetta is introduced before the vigorous coda.

Grigoriy Samuilovich Frid (b.1915) Sonata for viola and piano Op.62 No.1, 1971

(i) Tranquillo e molto cantabile; (ii) Allegro; (iii) Lento

This sonata was dedicated to Fyodor Druzhinin (1932-2007). Its three movements are based on the same thematic material, which is transformed and developed throughout the sonata. The first and third movements are largely reflective in character, the third comprising a lengthy accompanied cadenza for the viola. The second movement, a furious moto perpetuo, featuring relentless semiquaver writing in the piano part and passionate declamatory phrases for the viola, provides an effective contrast.

Sergey Vasilenko (1872-1956), Four pieces on themes by sixteenth and seventeenth-century lutenists

(i) Pavane; (ii) Madonna Tenerina (iii) Serenade for a Lady of my Heart; (iv) Knights

In the first decades of the twentieth century, Vasilenko undertook a few trips to Europe to carry out archival research in Vienna, Berlin, Bologna and Paris, with the aim of unearthing interesting compositions for the series of 'Historic Concerts' that he ran from 1907-17 in Moscow. He was allowed to copy scores by a number of little-known Renaissance and Baroque composers and on his return to Russia composed several pieces based on the material that he had discovered. Amongst them were two suites dating from 1912 and 1914 respectively — Fifteenth- and sixteenth-century lute music of the Minnesingers, Op. 24, and Sixteenth-century lute music, Op. 24a, for chamber orchestra. The Moscow critics were enthusiastic — 'early' music was virtually unknown in Russia at the time — and they especially admired two pieces by anonymous fifteenth-century composers, the exquisite 'Madonna Tenerina' and 'Knights', a boisterous Allegro. Four pieces on themes by sixteenth- and seventeenth-century lutenists, Op. 35, dates from 1918 and three of its four movements rework material from the Op. 24 and Op. 24a suites. There is no evidence that these pieces were performed in public during the composer's lifetime and they have remained unknown to this day.

Elena Artamonova

Iain Quinn was born in Cardiff, and began his musical training as a chorister at Llandaff Cathedral and organ student of Robert Court and Nicolas Kynaston. In 1994 he moved to the USA to pursue study at The Juilliard School, New York and later the University of Hartford (BM summa cum laude), and the Institute of Sacred Music, Yale University (MM). He holds the diplomas of Fellow of the Royal College of Organists and Fellow of the Royal Schools of Music. Following appointments in New York, he served as Director of Music at Trinity Episcopal Church, Hartford, Connecticut, and as Director of Music at the Cathedral Church of St. John, Albuquerque, New Mexico. He has performed throughout Europe, North America, Hong Kong, Australia, Brazil, Iceland and Russia, and his recordings appear on the Chandos, Hyperion, Paulus Gravadora, and Ravel CD labels. As a composer his compositions are published by Clarion Press, Encore Publications, GIA, and Paraclete Press. His edition of the unpublished organ works of Samuel Barber was issued by G. Schirmer (2010), and a critical edition of the organ works of Carl Czerny by A-R Editions (2011). An article on Barber was recently published in Tempo (CUP). He is Director of Music and College Tutor at the College of St. Hild and St. Bede and a Doctoral Fellow in the Department of Music, Durham University.

Since 2008, Elena has been researching 'The Unknown Viola of the Russian Avant-garde' at Goldsmith College, Centre for Russian Music, University of London, under the guidance of professor Alexander Ivashkin studying at the Central Libraries and Archives in Moscow, London and New York.

Elena has performed in Europe, the USA and Far East, with the English Symphony/String Orchestras, Russian Chamber Orchestra of London, Leonardo Orchestra, Moscow Gnesin and Moscow Conservatoire Chamber Orchestras. Her recent engagements have included collaborations with the JAVS and Henle Verlag, a series of research presentations in the UK and recitals with Nicholas Walker (piano/harp/sichord) exploring often undiscovered and diverse repertoire from Marais to Schittke with a special emphasis on the Russian musical heritage. Their recording of compete music for viola and piano by Sergey Vasilenko, the fruit of Elena's archival investigations, will be released later this year by London label 'Toscatto Classics'.

Елена Артамонова окончила Московскую государственную консерваторию имени П. И. Чайковского у Юрия Башмета. Продолжила обучение в аспирантуре в Лондоне у Мартина Аутрама, участвовала в мастер-классах и была удостоена нескольких престижных наград. Заведует струнным отделом школы Ранох в Шотландии (с 2000), также преподаёт в школе «Нью Холл» в Эссексе. Перевела на английский язык книгу С. Понятовского «История альтового искусства». Докторант Колледжа Голдсмита в Лондонском университете (с 2008) и Центра русской музыки под руководством профессора Александра Ивашкина. Гастролировала в Великобритании, в Европе, в России, в Южной Корее и в США. В ближайших планах — сотрудничество с Американским международным обществом альтистов (JAVS) и с немецким издательством «Henle Verlag», а также сольные концерты с пианистом Николасом Уокером, в программу которых входят малоизвестные произведения разных эпох, от Марс до Шнитке, с особым интересом к русской альтовой музыке. Их компакт-диск с записью всех альтовых произведений Сергея Василенко выйдет в лондонском издательстве «Toscatto Classics» (2011).

Nicholas Walker, acclaimed by the London Evening Standard as 'a prodigy, of awesome technical fluency backed by exceptional artistry', studied at the Royal Academy of Music and at the Moscow Conservatoire. Winner of the first Newport International Piano Competition, he has performed with major British Orchestras, recorded for BBC Radio 3, Cirrus, ASV, BMG Arte Nova, and Chandos, and given recitals worldwide. The first two discs of his recording of the complete Balakirev piano music for ASV received great critical acclaim, as has his live recording of the Liapunov Sonata on Danacord. He is also preparing an edition of all Johann Baptist Cramer's piano concertos, the first of which he played in the London Festival Orchestra's "Virtuoso Pianists" series. He recently gave the world premiere in St Petersburg of Balakirev's Grande Fantaisie on Russian Folksongs and a Balakirev Festival commemorating the centenary of the composer's death was held at St John's Smith Square at the end of 2010. He is currently recording the complete piano music of Balakirev for Naxos Николас Уокер — по мнению газеты «London Evening Standard», «музыкант редкого дарования, сочетающий потрясающее техническое совершенство с исключительным артистизмом». Окончил Лондонскую Королевскую академию музыки и Московскую государственную консерваторию имени Чайковского. Победитель Первого международного конкурса пианистов в Ньюпорте. Выступает с лучшими оркестрами Великобритании; записывается на «BBC Radio 3», «ASV», «BMG Arte Nova» и «Chandos»; выступает с сольными концертами по всему миру.

Первые два компакт-диска из полного собрания фортепианных сочинений Балакирева, записанные для фирмы «ASV», а также запись концерта, на котором была исполнена соната Ляпунова для фирмы «Dapagof», получили восторженный отзыв музыкальных критиков. Продолжает подготовку к публикации полное собрание фортепианных концертов Иоганна Бахиста Крамера, Первый из которых исполнен с Лондонским фестивальным оркестром в рамках концертной серии «Планисты-виртуозы». Недавно Николас сыграл мировую премьеру «Большой фантазии на русские народные темы» Балакирева в Санкт-Петербурге и провёл серию концертов в Церкви Святого Иоанна в Лондоне (2010), посвящённых столетию со дня смерти Балакирева. В настоящий момент записывает полное собрание фортепианной музыки Балакирева для фирмы «Naxos».

Elena Artamonova was born in Moscow and studied at the Gnesin Music College with Ludmila Vernigora and at the Tchaikovsky Conservatoire with Yuri Bashmet. After gaining her diplomas with honours in 1993 and 1998, she continued her studies in London with Martin Outram, violist of the Maggini Quartet, and attended the master classes of Nobuko Imai, Simon Rowland-Jones and Levon Chilingirian. During her postgraduate course, she won several prizes, including the British Reserve string prize and Michael Stucky Trust award. In April 2000 she was awarded the Associateship of the Royal College of Music with Honours and Fellowship of the London College of Music, subsequently becoming Musician in Residence and Head of Strings at Rannoch School, Scotland. Since moving back to England a few years ago, Elena has enjoyed a career as a performer and string coach. She is currently Musician in Residence at New Hall School, Essex.

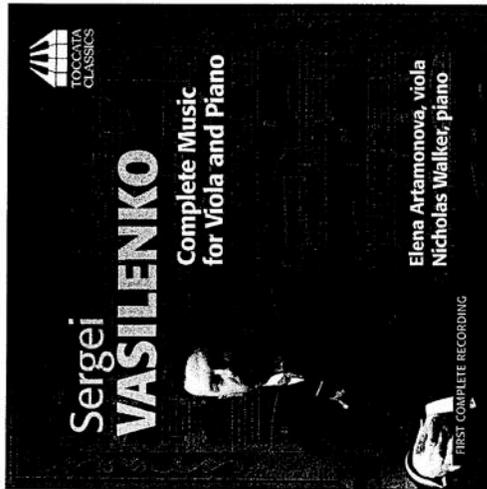

In 2003–4, commissioned by Comus Edition, Elena translated a book on the history of the viola written by a Russian author, Stanislaw Poniatowski. This historical area has been a central interest for her for some years. Since autumn 2008, she has been working on her research for 'The Unknown Viola Music of the Russian Avant-garde Movement' at Goldsmith College, Centre for Russian Music, University of London, under the guidance of Professor Alexander Ivashkin, studying at the central libraries and archives in Moscow, London and New York.

Elena has performed as a soloist, chamber-musician and as a viola leader in Russia, Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Netherlands, the USA and South Korea with various chamber groups and orchestras including the English Symphony/String Orchestras, Moscow Gnesin Chamber Orchestra, Moscow Conservatoire Chamber Orchestra, Leonardo Orchestra and the Russian Chamber Orchestra of London.

Nicholas Walker, acclaimed by The Evening Standard London as 'a prodigy, of awesome technical fluency backed by exceptional artistry', studied at the Royal Academy of Music and at the Moscow Conservatoire. Winner of the first Newport International Piano Competition, he has performed with major British Orchestras, recorded for BBC Radio 3, Cirrus, ASV, BMG Arte Nova and Chandos, and given recitals worldwide. The first two discs of his recording of the complete Balakirev piano music for ASV received considerable critical acclaim, as has his live recording of the Liapunov Sonata on Danacord. He is also preparing an edition of all Johann Baptist Cramer's piano concertos, the first of which he played in the London Festival Orchestra's 'Virtuoso Pianists' series. In St Petersburg recently he gave the first public performance of Balakirev's Grande Fantasia on Russian Folksongs, and a Balakirev Festival commemorating the centenary of the composer's death was held at St John's Smith Square at the end of 2010. He is currently recording the complete piano music of Balakirev for Naxos.

The Artamonova-Walker duo gave its first performance in April 2005 and since then has explored a fascinating, often undiscovered and diverse repertoire for viola and piano or harpsichord from Marais and Handel to Alexander Grechaninov and Alfred Schnittke. Their concert programmes, with special emphasis on the Russian heritage, has brought to light some remarkable arrangements by Vadim Borisovsky of works by Vivaldi-Bach, Schumann and Dmitry Bortnyansky as well as little-known viola music by Anton Rubinstein, Sergei Vasilenko, Vladimir Kovalev, Sulkhani Tsintsadze, Georg Kirkor and Sergei Slonimsky.

Upcoming CD available soon.

Special Thanks to Jeremy Lewis, Sue Poole, Martina McEnroe, Carol Moggridge, Pauline Salkeld, Michele Heimold and Jessica Page for all their help and support with the preparation for this concert.

Karim Said

Born in Amman in 1988, Karim Said started playing the piano at the age of five, studying with composer and pianist Agnes Bashir. At eight he gave his first solo recital, and two years later, he played Mozart's Concerto in C major K467 with orchestra. In September 2000 he enrolled with a scholarship at London's Purcell School of Music where he studied with Tessa Nicholson and later with Tatiana Sarkisova. In 2007, Karim was awarded a full scholarship to continue his studies with Professor Sarkisova at London's Royal Academy of Music.

He has performed in over twenty countries across Europe, the Middle and Far East at such venues as Manchester's Bridgewater Hall, London's Barbican Centre and Royal Albert Hall, The Great Hall of the Moscow Conservatory and Seoul's Jangcheon Art Hall. In addition to his collaboration as soloist with the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra and Daniel Barenboim, he has also performed with the English Chamber Orchestra under Sir Colin Davis. He is the recipient of over fifteen prizes, scholarships and awards.

BIOGRAPHIES

ELENA ARTAMONOVA was born in Moscow and studied at the Gnesin Music College and the Tchaikovsky Conservatoire under the world-renowned viola virtuoso Yuri Beshmet. After gaining her diplomas with Honours in 1993 and 1998, she continued her studies in London with Martin Outram - violist of the Meggini Quartet. During her postgraduate studies, she won several prizes including the British Reserve String prize and Michael Stucky Trust award. In April 2000, she was awarded Associateship of the Royal College of Music with Honours and Fellowship of the London College of Music, subsequently becoming Musician in Residence and Head of Strings at Rainnoch School, Scotland. Since moving back to England a few years ago, Elena has enjoyed her career as a viola performer and string coach. She currently holds the post of Musician in Residence at New Hall School in Essex.

In 2003-2004, commissioned by Cornus Edition, Elena translated a book on the history of the viola written by a Russian author, S. Pontalowski. This historical area has been a central interest for her for some years. Since Autumn 2008, Elena has been working on her research of Unknown viola works in Russia in the first half of the 20th century at Goldsmiths, University of London, studying at the Central Libraries and Archives in Moscow and London.

Elena has been performing as a soloist, a chamber musician and as a viola leader in Russia, Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Netherlands, the USA and South Korea with various chamber groups and orchestras including the English Symphony/String Orchestra, Moscow Gnesin Chamber Orchestra, Moscow Conservatoire Chamber Orchestra, Leonardo Orchestra, Chelmsford Sinfonietta and the Russian Chamber Orchestra of London. The engagements of this season include recitals in London with Nicholas Walker, piano/harp/chorus, recording of All Viola Music of Sergey Vasilenko, appearances at master classes of Nobuko Imai in Switzerland as well as presentations at research conferences in the UK.

NICHOLAS WALKER, hailed by the London Evening Standard as "...a prodigy, of awesome technical fluency backed by exceptional artistry", studied at the Royal Academy of Music where he won all the major awards for both piano and composition, and at the Moscow Conservatoire.

He won the first Newport International Piano Competition while still a student in Moscow and has since played with many British orchestras, including the City of Birmingham and National Symphony Orchestras, the Royal Philharmonic, London Mozart Players, the London Festival and New Queen's Hall Orchestras, the Philharmonia and the BBC National Symphony Orchestra of Wales. He has recorded for BBC Radio 3, Circus ASV, BMG Arts Nova, and Chandos, performed at all the major London concert halls, and in North and South America, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Scandinavia, Australia and Russia. Equally at home in chamber music, he is also sought after as an imaginative and sensitive accompanist.

While Nicholas Walker's individual approach to Beethoven has brought him special acclaim - a London concert being hailed by The Times as "a masterly recital" with Beethoven's Hammerklavier Sonata "in a class of its own" - he has also been described as "a natural Balakirev performer" (Financial Times), having collected many tributes to his performance of the lyrical and late romantic. Two discs of Balakirev piano music for ASV have received great critical acclaim, as has his live "seat-of-the-pants" recording of the Liapunov Sonata on Dacard, described by Jeremy Nicholas as "thrilling...a tour de force".

Nicholas is also preparing an edition of all Johann Baptist Cramer's piano concertos, the first of which he played recently the London Festival Orchestra's "Virtuoso Pianists" series, and recordings of these will also follow. Balakirev Festivals to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Balakirev's death are planned for the autumn of 2010 in both London and St Petersburg, where Nicholas recently gave the world premiere of the Grande Filarie ou Russian Folksongs in a concert devoted to Balakirev's music, a performance which received a rapturous reception and which was described by the St Petersburg Gazette as "astounding". His recent CD with Lydia Mordkovich of Russian music was Daily Telegraph CD the week, their next joint project will be the Bartok Sonatas. At the end of 2009 he began recording the complete piano music of Balakirev for Naxos, which will comprise six CDs containing a substantial amount of new and undiscovered material including a five movement piano sonata.

PROGRAMME NOTES:

SERGEY VASILENKO was not only an interesting and important figure among the composers based in Moscow in the first half of the 20th century, but also a respected authority in orchestration and professor at the Moscow Conservatoire for fifty years. He was brought up in an aristocratic family, whose inner circle of friends consisted of the leading writers, painters and artists of the time. I was privileged to work with his archive and research his publications in libraries in London and Moscow.

At the beginning of the 20th century, Vasilenko undertook a few trips to Europe to research in archives in Vienna, Berlin, Bologna and Paris. His main goal was to find interesting compositions for the series of Historic Concerts that he ran from 1907 - 17 in Moscow. He was given permission to copy some music of the forgotten and unknown Renaissance and Baroque composers. On his return to Russia, he wrote his own compositions based on the original tunes of these composers. In 1912 and 1914, Vasilenko wrote two Suites on the Themes of Lute Music of the 15-16th Centuries for a small symphony orchestra. The leading Moscow critics highly praised these works. Among especially admired pieces/movements were Madonna Tenerina and Knights.

It is not without reason that in 1918 Vasilenko used some of the tunes from these suites for his viola pieces. The composer followed the style of the 16th-century music, but applied to the 20th century language. The viola part has rather extensive manoeuvring in the high register, which was not typical for the Baroque period. With the kind permission from the Composers Union Library in Moscow and the British Library in London, I was fortunate to find the copies of the Four Pieces on the Themes of Lute Players of the 14-16th Centuries for viola and piano, which were published for the first and the last time in a limited edition in 1930.

Vasilenko belonged to traditionalists rather than modernists. The Russian composers of the second half of the 19th century were his heroes. Moreover, Vasilenko's early compositions were influenced by the Russian folklore and history. In the mid 1920s, his interests lay in oriental and Middle Eastern themes. His orientation viola sonata written in 1923 has a blend of reminiscences and influences of Oriental music, Romanticism, classical and, at the same time, modernistic language. The format of this sonata goes not only beyond the traditional sonata form. It also has a big cadenza and a few short cadenzas that give this sonata some elements of a concerto rather than an ordinary chamber work. The technical features are very demanding for both players. The viola part has unusually long passages of double stops, special string crossings and a complicated manoeuvring in the high register.

The soviet musicologist, Yuri Keldish, was of the opinion that the colours of timbres and sounds gained major importance in Vasilenko's language. Vasilenko was often interested in the external beauty of different musical styles rather than in the depths of their philosophies. The timbre guided the consciousness of the author giving him clues to the best choices of images and even the melodic structures of voices... The development of an idea forms the chain of feelings: timbre, register and theme. During the process of work, a theme gains its shape only after the inner hearing of the composer of certain timbres... (Yuri Keldish, History of Russian Music, Moscow: Muzika, 1997, Vol. 10A, 223.) I believe this opinion is relevant to Vasilenko's lute pieces as well as the sonata.

JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH did not write an organ concerto of his own, despite the fact that the organ was his first instrument. He deeply admired Antonio Vivaldi and transcribed a number of his instrumental concertos. Nowadays, these transcriptions are called Vivaldi-Bach concertos.

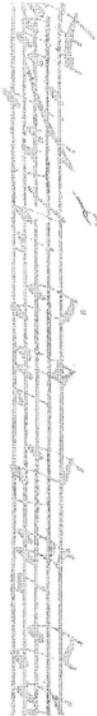

There is hardly a person who has heard nothing about Vivaldi or Bach. The name of the musician who arranged for the viola this second movement of Vivaldi/Bach's 3rd Organ concerto remains largely unknown even among specialists. Vadim Borisovsky rightfully occupies the place of the founder of the Russian school of viola performance. He was the member of the famous Beethoven Quartet which gave the premiers of many Dmitry Shostakovich quartets. For almost 50 years, Borisovsky taught at the Moscow Conservatoire, in which he founded the faculty of solo viola performance. Among his many talented students was our contemporary, an internationally renowned soloist Yuri Bashmet, who moved on further to promote the viola as a solo instrument, performing on the best concert stages around the world. Borisovsky's dedication and professionalism were appreciated not only in the Soviet Union, but also abroad. Among his distinguished admirers were Lionel Tertis in the UK and Paul Hindemith in Germany, to name a few. Borisovsky made tremendous contribution to the development of the viola and enlargement of its solo repertoire. He is the author of many fine arrangements of lute. Among them is this movement, which is a cadenza of its kind. One may say that Borisovsky successfully linked the traditional and modern approaches in his free arrangement, combined virtuosity and intimacy of the viola timbre palette within this single movement.

The compositions that are listed in this programme are related to my PHD thesis on the Unknown Viola Music of the Russian Avant-garde Movement.

This paper investigates the factors that made Russian Avant-garde composers to write for an instrument that occupied a subservient position to the violin and other members of the string family up to the second half of the 19th century. The beginning of the 20th century is regarded as the Silver Age of Russian culture owing to the emergence of a highly gifted generation of musicians, writers and painters. The aim of this study is to analyse the roles of Nikolai Roslavets and Sergey Vasilenko in the enhancement of the viola as a solo instrument at the beginning of the 20th century. They both took their inspirations from the Silver Age aesthetics and modified their language according to the requirements of the new musical epoch. Vasilenko managed to keep ties with the tradition whereas Roslavets moved on towards the unknown.

Their creative endeavour for greater efficiency took the issues of viola performance to new heights. Vadim Borisovsky, the leading viola soloist in the Soviet Union at that time, played a crucial role in this process. He gave premiers of many viola compositions dedicated to him, including the viola sonata by Vasilenko with the author at the piano in January 1924. Both of the completed viola sonatas by Roslavets were also dedicated to this fine violist. Only a few recordings of Borisovsky have survived. Thus, his viola arrangements, in particular his free arrangements that allow more freedom of interpretation, became the best sources for understanding of Borisovsky's instrumental style. They reveal the strategies and approaches that were essential for Borisovsky for an efficient and effective musical performance. Consequently, this knowledge could be used to facilitate the analysis of the factors that influenced Russian Avant-garde composers to write for the viola and this soloist in particular.

Biographies

Elena Artamonova was born in Moscow and studied at the Gnesin Music College and the Tchaikovsky Conservatoire under the world-renowned viola virtuoso Yuri Bashmet. After gaining her diplomas with Honours in 1993 and 1998, she continued her studies in London with Martin Outram - violist of the Maggini Quartet. During her postgraduate studies, she won several prizes including the British Reserve String prize and Michael Stucky Trust award. In April 2000, she was awarded Associateship of the Royal College of Music with Honours and Fellowship of the London College of Music, subsequently becoming Musician in Residence and Head of Strings at Rannoch School, Scotland. Since moving back to England a few years ago, Elena has enjoyed her career as a viola performer and string coach. She currently holds the post of Musician in Residence at New Hall School in Essex.

In 2003-2004, commissioned by Comus Edition, Elena translated a book on the history of the viola written by a Russian author, S. Poniatowski. This historical area has been a central interest for her for some years. Since Autumn 2008, Elena has been working on her research of "Unknown viola works in Russia in the first half of the 20th century" at Goldsmith College, University of London, studying at the Central Libraries and Archives in Moscow and London.

Elena has been performing as a soloist, a chamber musician and as a viola leader in Russia, Britain, Germany, France, Belgium, Netherlands, the USA and South Korea with various chamber groups and orchestras including the English Symphony/String Orchestra, Moscow Gnesin Chamber Orchestra, Moscow Conservatoire Chamber Orchestra, Leonardo Orchestra, Chelmsford Sinfonietta and the Russian Chamber Orchestra of London. The engagements of this season include recitals in London with Nicholas Walker, piano/harpsichord, recording of "All Viola Music of Sergey Vasilenko", appearances at master classes of Nobuko Imai in Switzerland as well as presentations at research conferences in the UK.

Nicholas Walker, hailed by the London Evening Standard as "...a prodigy, of awesome technical fluency backed by exceptional artistry", studied at the Royal Academy of Music where he won all the major awards for both piano

the major London concert halls, and in North and South America, France, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Scandinavia, Australia and Russia. Equally at home in chamber music, he is also sought after as an imaginative and sensitive accompanist.

While Nicholas Walker's individual approach to Beethoven has brought him special acclaim - a London concert being hailed by The Times as "a masterly recital" with Beethoven's Hammerklavier Sonata "in a class of its own" - he has also been described as "a natural Balakirev performer" (Financial Times), having collected many tributes to his performance of the lyrical and late romantic. Two discs of Balakirev piano music for ASV have received great critical acclaim, as has his live "seat-of-the-pants" recording of the Liapunov Sonata on Danacord, described by Jeremy Nicholas as "thrilling...a tour de force".

Nicholas is also preparing an edition of all Johann Baptist Cramer's piano concertos, the first of which he played recently at the London Festival Orchestra's "Virtuoso Pianists" series, and recordings of these will also follow. Balakirev Festivals to commemorate the 100th anniversary of Balakirev's death are planned for the autumn of 2010 in both London and St Petersburg, where Nicholas recently gave the world premiere of the "Grande Fantasia on Russian Folksongs" in a concert devoted to Balakirev's music, a performance which received a rapturous reception and which was described by the St Petersburg Gazette as "astonishing". His recent CD with Lydia Mordkovitch of Russian music was Daily Telegraph CD the week; their next joint project will be the Bartok Sonatas. At the end of 2009 he began recording the complete piano music of Balakirev for Naxos, which will comprise six CDs containing a substantial amount of new and undiscovered material including a five movement piano sonata.

Nicholas Walker also teaches at the Royal Academy of Music in London.

¹ This only up-to-date complete record of Vasilenko's compositions has been compiled by the author of this thesis using all available unpublished and published sources on Vasilenko that are listed in the Bibliography. The following data is shown for each composition where appropriate: 1. The original title of a work is usually given in transliterated form in italics followed by its English translation in square brackets. If the work is derived from a French/Italian/Spanish/German work, then its original title is provided. 2. Keys of a work and subtitles of movements may be given. 3. Description of instrumentation, date/opus number of composition, if known. 4. Sources of the text and libretto for choral/vocal/stage/film works are given with full names of their authors (initials given only when the full name is unknown). 5. The details of a work's first performance: full names of the soloist and conductor (initials given only when the full name is unknown), the place and date, if known. Please note that Russia was behind the Western European calendar as it used the Julian calendar until February 1918, when it changed to the Gregorian calendar adopted in the West, which resulted in a loss of 13 days (31 January 1918 was followed by 14 February 1918). 6. The inter-relationships between two works are explained and cross-references indicate where one work is derived from another.

A brief review of the language of the pieces of the early 1950s

It is necessary to evaluate these fine works for their future performers as the author of this thesis had the privilege to find and decipher these manuscripts for the first time.

The manuscript of a piece with the very imaginative title Spiashchaia reka [Sleeping River] is dated 5 August 1951. It is Vasilenko's arrangement of a piece from his Antichnaia siuita [Ancient Suite] for piano, which was published by Iurgenson in Moscow in February 1915.⁹ The composer not only changed the key to D major from its original E major but considerably reviewed the whole text, giving the viola a quasi-cadenza section in the middle. Both instruments are equal partners in this composition, but carrying out different roles. The viola leads the theme throughout and the piano gives a colourful harmonic display.

The manuscript of the Kolybel'naia [Lullaby] is neither dated nor mentioned in any of Vasilenko's catalogues and published sources. However, an analysis of the style of this work allows one to suggest that this composition belongs to the same period of the early 1950s. This beautiful and charming piece in E minor that follows the style of a lullaby song unexpectedly develops into a very expressive agitated middle section with a viola cadenza, which eventually brings back the tranquillity of the initial theme.

The set of originally five contrasting picturesque pieces without an opus number is dated 25 August 1953. However, this date appears only on the manuscript of the second piece called Etude. Nevertheless, the pieces undoubtedly belong to the same cycle, which consists of a Preliudia, Etiud, Legenda and Skertso [Prelude, Etude, Legend and Scherzo]. They survived only as viola-piano scores with many modifications, which are at times almost impossible to read. There is another piece inscribed Toccata and marked as the third in the cycle. It is the only piece of this set that has a separate viola part. The analysis of the Toccata's score and solo part revealed that this piece is a rougher version of the Scherzo. The composer not only retained the same F major key in both compositions but also kept the same viola line in the manuscripts of both scores. Only the viola solo part of the Toccata differs in technical application. It has continuous passages of double stops throughout, which Vasilenko did not transfer to the score of this piece. It is likely that this extreme virtuosity in a brisk tempo allegro vivace became a major impediment and impracticality for the composer even during its working stage. The fact that the composer himself chose the Scherzo version for his Toccata score and the very poor quality and inconsistency of the Toccata score manuscript allow one to decide in favour of the Scherzo.

The Prelude in this cycle is a short piece of an improvisatory character in D major. The opening theme led by the viola is vocal and chromatic in nature and, at first, does not expand into the high register. It sequentially develops with alterations in harmony and rhythm, which transform this initially delicate tune into an expressive, passionate melody. It is enriched with double stops with special emphasis on dissonant intervals of minor and major sevenths and leaps articulated by double-dotted quavers and crochets that bring extra intensity to the character of the music. In the last bars of the piece the piano takes the lead and breaks the melody into short motifs that gradually restrain and soften the emotions to pianissimo.

Vasilenko gave the viola a full leadership role in the Etude. It is not a didactic study but a concert piece, though it conforms to a single facet of technique marked by harmonic experimentation and modulation from C minor to C major. The chromatic character and uninterrupted waves of semiquaver passages written in presto might remind one of Rimskii-Korsakov's Flight of the Bumble-Bee. Vasilenko placed special emphasis on the viola timbre and dynamic contrasts and finished this piece with a natural harmonic in pianissimo, which adds a decorative finishing touch to this virtuosic instrumental display.

The Legend is written in a ternary form, in which the first part is in C major, the second in D major and the recapitulation of the first modulates to A major and returns to the home key C. However, this is just a tonal frame, with which Vasilenko constantly experimented with chromatic unresolved modulations that play the role of unpredictable tonal contrasts. The piece exhibits narrative qualities not only in the title that translates from Latin ‘to be read’, but also in the instrumental texture and application, in which both instruments, in turn, become either passive or active participants. The viola is the storyteller in the introduction with the opening theme of a vocal nature accompanied by arpeggiated chords of the piano that remind one of a gusli player.¹⁰ This instrumental subordination changes and both instruments start a dialogue that leads to a quazi viola cadenza, an episode that precedes the middle section of a contrasting scherzando character. The return of the first theme is rhythmically and instrumentally unanticipated, though it retains its compound meter 9/8. The piano leads the melody, whilst the viola accompanies with ascending scalar chromatic passages in sextuplets. In common with the Prelude, the theme then breaks into short motifs that dissolve in pianissimo. The author of this thesis has discovered that this piece is Vasilenko’s arrangement of the middle part from the last movement from his Indusskaia siuita [Hindu/Indian Suite] op. 42a, 1927, for symphony orchestra that is based on the music from the ballet-pantomime Noiia [Noya] op. 42, 1923. This finding explains the unpredictability of ¹⁰ Similar associations formed in the Serenade for the Lady of my Heart. See footnote 179 in the third chapter.

tonal contrasts and picturesque quality of the piece, which initially illustrated a ballet based on oriental melodies.¹¹

The Scherzo in F major exhibits the traditional playful humorous character with a fast tempo marked here Allegro molto vivace, quasi presto. At the same time, the piece follows an unconventional route and is written in a duple time 2/4 instead of a triple meter. Vasilenko also offered an innovative approach to the form and harmonic display with modulations to distantly related and unrelated keys. It is a through-composed structure with self-contained sections ABCA¹B¹ and a conclusion instead of a traditional ternary form. Nearly uninterrupted chromatic and scalar runs of semiquavers in the viola part present a spectacular technical display and timbre contrast with an accelerando in tempi toward the end of the piece.

¹¹ The ballet Noya, in which Vasilenko used melodies of Hindu, Japanese, Vietnamese and Chinese folklore, was never staged. The archive of Vasilenko has only one concert programme, in which his orchestral Hindu (Indian) Suite op. 42a was performed. It was the first and, it is likely, the only performance of this work that took place in Moscow, in 1927. Sergei Vasilenko, Priglasitel'nye bilet'y, programmy spektaklei i kontsertov. Housed in RGALI, fund 2579, op. 1, ed. khr. 417, p. 2. The melody of the Legend in the orchestral suite is played in turn by clarinet, oboe, bassoon, upper and lower strings, violin and flute. A sound recording may be found in: Sergei Vasilenko, Chinese Suite op. 60, Indian Suite op. 42a. Moscow Symphony Orchestra, Henry Shek (conductor), Marco Polo 8.223783, 1995, compact disc. Aleksandr Blok

The Singing Maiden

English Version by Rosa Newmarch¹²

In the church-choir was a maiden singing
Of all who languished in foreign lands,
Of all the great ships that sailed the ocean,
Of all whose joy had passed out of mind.

¹² This translation and punctuation are copied from the only publication of this romance in English: The Singing Maiden. La jeune fille chantait, op. 13, no. 1, after Aleksandr Blok. English Version by Rosa Newmarch, paroles françaises de Georges Jean-Aubry. London, Brighton: J&W. Chester, 1917. Rosa Newmarch had to balance her translation of Blok with the melodic line and metre of the romance, which explains her occasional freedom of approach to the original text of Blok that may mislead one in the understanding of its symbolic meaning. Thus, in the last verse ‘a babe, receiving infant communion’, the translator missed out an important phrase ‘a Participant in the Mysteries’ (‘Tainy’ [Mysteries] has a capital letter in the text of Blok) that points to the representation of the Child Jesus on the icon ‘The Mother of God Hodegetria’ rather than just a baby receiving communion. For this reason, the author of this paper has attached a copy of the text of Blok in Russian and her own English translation of this poem, in which the translator followed the original text very closely. Further information on the meaning of this poem may be found in the fifth chapter in the subsection ‘Old Believers’ practices and chants and their role in Vasilenko’s musical expression’.

She sang, and her voice to the cupola mounted,
Her snowy shoulder flashed [be]‘neath the lamps.
And those in the shadows looked up and listened
As, white-robed, she sang, Encircled in light.

To all, her song told a tale of promise,
All ships it seemed came back safely, to port;
And all sad exiles in far distant countries
Led there a life unclouded and bright.

So sweet was her singing, so subtle the radiance;
But far up the church, near the Royal Gates,
A babe, receiving infant communion,
Kept wailing because none would ever return.

Александр Блок “Девушка пела в церковном хоре...” (Август 1905)¹³

Девушка пела в церковном хоре

О всех усталых в чужом краю,

О всех кораблях, ушедших в море,

О всех, забывших радость свою.

Так пел ее голос, летящий в купол,

И луч сиял на белом плече,

И каждый из мрака смотрел и слушал,

Как белое платье пело в луче.

И всем казалось, что радость будет,

Что в тихой заводи все корабли,

Что на чужбине усталые люди

Светлую жизнь себе обрели.

И голос был сладок, и луч был тонок,

И только высоко, у Царских Врат,

Причастный Тайнам, - плакал ребенок

О том, что никто не придет назад.

Aleksandr Blok The Girl Sang in the Church Choir...

Translated by Elena Artamonova (September 2013)

The girl sang in the church choir

About all who are weary in a foreign land,

About all ships headed to sea,

About all who have forgotten their joy.

So sang her voice, soaring up into the cupola,

And a ray shone on her white shoulder,

And everyone watched and listened from the gloom

As the white dress sang in the ray of light.

And it seemed to them that joy will come,

That all ships are in a quiet bay,

That the weary in a foreign land

Have gained an enlightened life for themselves.

And her voice was sweet, and the ray of light was slender,

And only high up, at the Royal Doors,

A Participant in the Mysteries – a baby was weeping

Because no-one would return.
